

The Flowering of Christ – Resurrection 2

Sunday, July 31, 2022 5:30 am

1. Chance encounter. It's such a surprise to run into you today. Who knew that you would see someone you know in such a big crowd? Let's step into a diner and have a cup of coffee while we catch up, shall we?
2. It's so nice to be in each other's company on this fine day. My first topic is about life itself. I promised we would hit the ground running when we last spoke, so let's do precisely that.
3. The person who asked this question wants to know when life begins, specifically for babies. Life is always alive, for lack of a better term. Life is never dead. Life takes on form, leaves that form, and then takes on a new form. My answer will now address two realities. One is the ideal world where form and spirit are merged as one state and one is the human world of disunion.
4. In the state of union, life is allowed to freely express, and form does not dictate conditions to it. In the world of human reality or disunion, forms do make individual decisions about bringing another form into the world and many of these are quite valid. Choosing to be a mentor to a child is a major life decision and this is accepted as such. Frankly, life doesn't want mentorship forced on someone who is very much in a separate state spiritually speaking, as mentorship, or parenthood as you refer to it as is such a demanding and time-consuming endeavor. It requires love, and some feel that they cannot provide that, understandably so.
5. I realize that this is one of the biggest issues of the day, if not the biggest. What I'm hoping to do is simply take the fear out of it for you and help you to see the big picture holistically. We all understand how pregnancies happen and we can understand how pregnancy can be seen as a consequential burden to some and a cause for celebration for others. Most of my readers here are not of childbearing age any longer, so this doesn't directly affect any or many of you. Like so many other things here, pregnancy decisions are left up to the involved individuals, as part of their spiritual growth. Christ does not judge; therefore, we are not part of this conflict. We don't make anyone do anything, especially something as difficult as mentorship. Unlike the human government, we know that God is not offended by the choice of declining a mentorship opportunity.
6. Now onto lighter fare. Here is the third 'Secret of Christ'.
7. Christ's heart is in a state of union with its form's mind and the Christ Mind. Christ understands concepts on the human level and on the higher level. Christ sees it all, through the eyes of love.
8. I will see you each again in one week's time. Until then, many spectacular blessings!
Love, Mother Mary
